DEMOCRATS IN AIR ON ISSUES OF CAMPAIGN

Various Groups Urge Radical Change of Conservative Platform

HEADS DISCUSS PROBLEM

Hope to Take Advantage of Radicalism in States West of Alleghenies

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1927, By Post Pub. Co. Washington. — Although the question of personalities still is dominant when Democratic leaders get together for conference on the political outlook there is beginning to be more talk of what should be the issue of the presidential campaign.

Having been defeated in the last two campaigns with a liberal conservative platform, the Democrats are being urged by various groups to make a radical change. Instead of being so close to the Conservatives who are in control of the Republican party, the Democrats are being told their only opportunity lies in becoming the direct antithesis of their political opponents. The idea is that the Republicans have entrenched themselves in New England and the Atlantic state but that radicalism is developing west of the Alleghenies.

The congressional election of 1926 did not reveal any drift toward radicalism but some of the political scouts say conditions are changing in the midwest and that McNary-Hausman is an example of how far a radical program can get nowadays.

PLENTY OF ISSUES

There are plenty of issues on which a radical stand can be taken by the Democrats and they will thereby win the support of many insurgent Republicans. In fact when congress meets next time the chances of a coalition between the Democrats and the insurgent Republicans may be said to be very bright indeed. During the last session the Democrats stood their own ground as a sort of a mean between the conservative Republicans and the insurgent Republicans. This policy may be scrapped next time for while in the Democratic ranks are some conservative Democrats, there are radicals on the other hand who are getting ready to stir up the political pot in December.

Broadly speaking, the sentiment which the radicals believe they can crystallize on economic issue, is that which might arise from a discussion of the large margins in business and the growth of economic power on the part of large business institutions.

Here and there is heard discussion similar to that of "money trust" days. Both Boulder dam and Muscle Shoals involve issues of government ownership as contrasted with private ownership.

ASK LOWER RATES

The cry for lower freight rates and possible amendment of the transportation act is in the air again. There is a good deal of criticism of recent theories developed by the federal courts with respect to physical valuation of properties. On top of this is the all-important matter of tax revision and the discontent of certain western groups with the Tordney-McCumber tariff law.

The Democrats are talking about an aggressive leadership in the next congress which shall make the issues for the presidential campaign and judging by the conversation of various Democratic leaders the situation is rapidly developing symptoms of an old fashioned campaign in which much will be heard of "the interests" and the "concentrations of power in the hands of the few" and the growth of monopoly in new form. The central thought of the politicians who are advancing a plea for radicalism is that conservatism will never win for the Democrats and that they must be decidedly different to corral the discontent of the country and to appeal to those who would like to see a new deal at Washington.

SENATE VOTES MONEY TO SEND BAND TO PARIS

Markham's Attempt to Limit Selection to Beaver Dam Body Defeated

Madison.—(AP)—The state senate Friday passed an assembly bill providing for $10,000 appropriation with which to send a Wisconsin band and drum corps to the American legion convention in Paris.

The amount would be divided equally between the band and the drum corps. No organizations were designated. Selection is to be made by the University of Wisconsin's Conservatory of Music.

A substitute amendment submitted by Senator Markham, which would have limited the selection of a band to the Beaver Dam legion band was rejected. The bill now goes to Governor Zimmerman for final action.

The assembly bill abolishing all state-owned cars was concurred in by the senate Friday. This bill provides that all persons in state service needing automobiles would have to purchase their own and would receive not more than $30 a month for upkeep.

MUST DRIVE 600 MILES

The measure further provides that no employee shall be paid the $30 a month unless it is shown that he used his car in state service to the extent of at least six hundred miles a month. The bill now goes to the governor for his approval or veto.

Normal school appropriations became the subject of brief but spirited debate in the assembly before they were laid over until next Tuesday. The senate finished work on the appropriation bill for the teachers' colleges Thursday and in an effort to speed the close of the session the bill came to immediate attention of the chamber.

The spokesman for the American delegation said Friday that the delegation was willing in principle to discuss "any conceivable details of the proposed treaty." He made as a provision for such discussion, that the British begin by fixing a total tonnage for cruisers which would be considerably lower than the figures they have already advanced. The spokesman's statement was in answer to the speech made Thursday at the public session by W. C. Bridgeman, first Lord of the Admiralty and Britain's chief delegate.

In the lower house, debate was started but when it was pointed out that the assembly would have time to spare before the senate finished all of its business the discussion was postponed. The assembly pointed toward early finish of its work refused to concur with the senate in joint resolution withdrawing two bills, already passed, from the governor for further consideration.

One of the bills calls for recondition and revision of the state education laws.

HOUSE CONCURS

The lower house concurred with the senate in Senator Chase's interim boards and commissions and repealing obsolete laws and passed the Gaubill bill, for acquisition of sites along Lake Michigan for park purposes.

Several other measures of minor importance were on the calendar but most of the business was on bills and measures outside of the regular schedule.

MADISON GETS $235,000

The increase as outlined in an amendment by Senator White, allows the following additions: Milwaukee, $55,000 for gymnasium; La Crosse, $35,000; dormitories: Oshkosh, $25,000; auditorium: Superior, $150,000; library.

Senator Goodland; Racine, charged that the whole amendment was the result of a "trade" between the Senators from the districts who would be benefited and that a similar "trade" would be made in the assembly.

The Senate killed a committee on highways bill repealing the personal property tax on motor vehicles and subscribing a privilege tax.

Senator Smith's fire works bill, once killed, was reconsidered and passed. The bill limits the size of fireworks that might be sold in the state.

OF FINDING LOST PLANE

St. John, N. F.—New hope for definite knowledge of the fate of the missing French trans-Atlantic flyers rested Friday on the probability that wreckage sighted by two hunters was that of the ill fated White Bird plane of Captains Nungesser and Col. If Major F. Snyder, Cotton Guggenheim expedition aviator, who has been searching for the missing birdie for more than a month, thinks the stories of the woodmen are worth investigating he is expected to delay his projected return to New York city in order to fly over the new territory.

Major Cottam made a special trip to Flat Bay to interview the hunters who came out of the woods with a report that about forty miles inland they had sighted what looked like a large white boat.

The men said the object was in the middle like of a small lake and they were several miles distant. The distance is about 500 miles from this city and is exceedingly rugged.

NOTED IRISH COUNTESS DIES AFTER OPERATION

Dublin.—(AP)—Countess Markievicz, for many years one of the most remarkable personalities in Irish life, died early Friday morning. Her husband and stepson and Eamon De Valera, the Republican leader, were at the bedside when she passed away at St. Patrick Dunn's hospital, where she had been a patient for some weeks.

The countess, whose activities extended throughout the troubled years when the Irish people were fighting for independence, underwent two operations for appendicitis and a week ago suffered a relapse, which led to reports in Dublin that she had died.

For the part she played in the Easter week rebellion of 1916, Countess Markievicz was sentenced to death but the sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life and she was released in 1917 to continue less rebellious, but equally strenuous activities in the political arena.

FIRE BLOCKS TRAFFIC ON NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD

DeKalb, Ill.—(AP)—Both east and west bound traffic over the Chicago and Northwestern railroad was held up early Friday by a fire which destroyed the company's coal chute and coal supply here. Estimated loss was $50,000. Officials said it would be dawn before the tracks could be cleared to permit resumption of traffic.

PAROLE MUNCIE EDITOR OF 90-DAY SENTENCE

Indianapolis.—(AP)—George R. Dale, Muncie, Ind., publisher who for four years has been fighting a 90-day sentence to the state farm for contempt of the Delaware Circuit court, was Friday paroled by Governor El. Jackson upon recommendation of the trustees of the farm.

1 KILLED, 1 INJURED WHEN PLANE CRASHES

Hamilton.—(AP)—Second Lieut. Herbert V. Vanatta, air reserve, Buffalo, Wyoming, was killed instantly and his passenger Benjamin W. Craycraft, Euclid, Fla., was seriously injured early Friday morning when the airplane which Vanatta was piloting exploded and crashed to the ground.

Accept Flower Calls Until 8:10 Saturday Morning

Calls from persons who will have flowers which they are willing to give to patients of St. Elizabeth hospital and Riverview sanatorium on Saturday morning will be received by The Post-Crescent until 8:10 tomorrow morning. The calls will start their weekly trips about 5:15 and expect to complete the work by noon. All that you have to do is call 543 and leave your name and address. Calls will be taken until 7 o'clock tonight and from 7 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Patients and nurses at the hospital and sanatorium are looking forward to the visit of the Flower Cars as the happiest period of the week. Nurses say their work is made easier by the happiness which the gifts of flowers bring to the patients. Flowers sometimes do more for the patients than all the medicine and other care that is given them because they help the patients take their minds off their disabilities.

Last week about 100 bouquets were collected, hardly enough to reach all the patients in the institutions who are not regularly remembered with gifts. It is hoped that this number will be largely increased tomorrow.

About 60 per cent of the flowers are delivered to the hospital here and 40 per cent to the sanatorium. Experience has shown this to be an equitable distribution. Flowers are delivered to the patients by nurses and attendants in the institutions.

REVIEW NAVAL SITUATION

HENRY WHITE, NOTED DIPLOMAT, IS DEAD

Was Former Ambassador to France and Italy and Delegate at Peace Meet

Pittsfield, Mass.—(AP)—Henry White, former Ambassador to France and Italy and American delegate to the Paris peace conference, died Friday morning.

The three condemned men presented a unique appearance in that they mounted the scaffold with long, flowing hair, mustaches and beards. Since they attempted to escape for the third time, six weeks ago, and they had been denied razors or the services of a barber.

The men remained awake virtually all night long.

REFUSE LAST DINNER

They refused the usual banquet tendered condemned men but none of them cared for delicacies. Stanley and Torrez spent their last hours in prayer. They had read prayerbooks and spent many of their last days on their knees. Duschowski remained "hard-boiled" nearly until the last.

It was after midnight before he said rather reluctantly that he guessed he would see a priest.

Stalesky was pronounced dead at 6:25. Duschowski at 6:30 and Torrez at 6:32. The necks of all three were broken.

The men remained awake virtually all night long.

ENTER SERVICE

In 1855, he entered the diplomatic service as secretary of the United States legation at Vienna, going later to London as first secretary, retiring and then again assuming the office under President McKinley, which he held until 1905 when he was appointed ambassador to Italy. Designated by President Roosevelt as the representative of the United States to the International conference on Moroccan affairs at Algeciras in 1906. Ambassador White took a leading part in that historic parley, the result of which, it was said, averted a European war.

Mr. White was born in Baltimore, Md., March 29, 1850, and was educated in the United States and in France. He came from an old and distinguished Maryland family. In 1879 he married Miss Margaret Stuyvesant Rutherdale of New York, a sister-in-law of William K. Vanderbilt. Mrs. White died in Lenox, Mass., in 1916. Their daughter Margaret, is the Countess Scher-Thoss, wife of an officer of the Royal Prussian cuirassiers whose father was a murderer and son of the slain prison guard, and Emory B. Moore, brother of the slain.

Mrs. Peter Klein, widow of the slain prison officer, was at the jail early, renewing her request that she be permitted to spring the triple trap. The request again was refused, and Mrs. Klein remained quietly in the jail office while the execution took place.

"Life was sweet to them," she said, "and they did not want to die. But they didn't think how sweet it was if they didn't think how sweet was life to my husband, nor about his wife and two children."

ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Torrez, Stalesky and Duschowski were left of seven who slew Peter Klein, deputy warden and escaped from the state penitentiary near here May 5.

THREE HANGED FOR MURDER OF PRISON GUARD

Wife of Slain Man Refused Request to Pull Trap Sending Men to Death

Joliet.—(AP)—Outdoors in a heavy fog, while 400 men, who only a moment before had been laughing and shouting to each other looked on, the three convicts left of seven who slew Peter Klein, deputy warden at the state penitentiary near here on May 5, were hanged at 6:18 Friday morning.

Those who witnessed the spectacle, one of the last hangings in Illinois had fought and struggled for hours to get into the enclosure, walled about by a 20-foot board fence to keep out those who did not hold passes signed by the sheriff. Preceded by four priests, the three men, Roberto Torrez, Mexican; Walter Stalesky, Pole, and Charles Duschowski, a giant Lithuanian, emerged from the jail at 6:10.

GRIN AT DEATH

Duschowski was grinning broadly and continued to smile until the white cap was placed over his head. The three men walked with firm step. Torrez took his stand and looked up at the noose which dangled over his head. Stalesky paled and staggered momentarily, but quickly regained his composure. While Duschowski continued to grin still, Torrez summoned a smile to his face and in a clear voice shouted, "Goodby, everybody."

That was the only audible remark made by any of the three condemned men. The ceremony was extremely brief and the three bodies shot through the trap door together.

CARRY WATER STILLS

Two small water stills, one for sea water into drinkable fluids.

Ernest L. Smith, pilot, and Emory B. Moore, navigator, had the consolation that they might remain adrift if they could make a safe landing in the open sea but they knew nothing of the help that was rushing toward them because their receiving set broke down shortly after leaving San Francisco, Thursday.

Besides a rubber life raft, similar to the type Commander E. B. Ward used after being forced down off the French coast, Smith had a pair of collapsible oars, a tire pump, rubber patches, two dozen flares and a signal pistol.

According to computations here the plane had been in the air 21 hours and 5 minutes and covered a distance of about 1,500 miles. She was presumably 400 miles from the nearest land. She probably fell short of Honolulu by some 700 miles.

Breaking through the dense fog, feebly peep, the monoplane radio called for help after 5:30 a.m. Friday, 70 miles northeast of Paia, Maui, and with only enough gasoline to stay in the air an hour.

Several ships caught the message and at least three of them rushed to her aid.

When the second call was received at 6:20 Pacific time the steamer, Wilhelmina, which was 200 miles from the distressed plane, had left her course and gone to the aid of the aviators.

CHILDREN MUST GET PERMITS TO WORK DURING VACATION

Heilig Points Out Necessity for Abiding by State Regulation

A warning that child labor permits are just as necessary during the summer months when there is no school as they are during the school year is given by Herb Heilig, director of the Vocational school. Most parents are ready to cooperate, according to Mr. Heilig but there are others who try hard to evade the law.

One hundred and thirty-five permits have been issued so far this summer, and over half of these are to boys who wish to caddy. Several exceptions are made to the general permit rule especially in the case of girls who wish to do housework in private homes. These girls do not need permits. Street permits to sell papers and magazines can be obtained from Mr. J. G. Pfeil, school attendance officer, according to Mr. Heilig. Permits to work may be obtained at the vocational school from 8:30 to 11:30 in the morning.

Some parents are reluctant to abide by the state law regulating child labor and several methods are used to evade the law.

Parents sometimes become abusive when told that their children are too young to do certain kinds of work according to Mr. Heilig. One such instance occurred a few days ago when a parent wanted a permit for his son to work as a water-boy with a construction gang out of the city. Under the state law, boys must be over 17 years of age to do this work and when told this the parent proceeded to tell Mr. Heilig what he thought of the ruling.

Employers are also warned about hiring children without permits. The vocational school does not make an effort to run down these violators but the employer is taking a chance of getting into trouble that might cost him much trouble.

50 OUTAGAMIE MEN AMONG 1,200 AT EXPERIMENT FARM

Splendid Program Provided at Summer Meeting at Sturgeon Bay

BY W. F. WINSEY
Sturgeon Bay—Twelve hundred people from northeastern Wisconsin attended the farmers annual field day meeting at the Peninsular Experiment Station, near here, on Thursday. Among those present were fifty Outagamie-co farmers, fifty Brown-co farmers, seventy-five farmers from Keweenaw-co, a boat load of farmers and other people from Oconto and Marinette-co, and a large representation of the farmers of Door-co.

One part of the program, under direction of Miss Gladys Meloche of the home economics department of the college of agriculture, was designed for women, another for farmers, another for short course graduates and another for everybody.

Among the speakers and demonstrators were Prof. E. J. Dolwiche, director of the local station; Prof. A. A. Gernsky, an insect and pest controller of the agricultural college; Prof. R. A. Moore, Prof. F. L. Musbach, Prof. E. L. Luther, farm institute superintendent, and Prof. George Briggs, specialist on soybeans. Miss Meloche gave demonstration lessons in sewing and the selection of foot wear. Prof. Dolwiche outlined the purpose of the station and the kind and the scope of the work done, presided at the principal sessions and conducted field demonstrations in the growing of grain.

After showing pictures of the corn borer at work and in each stage of its development, Prof. Gernsky said that "an ounce of prevention in the control of the borer is worth a pound of cure." The borer has reached two points on the shore of Lake Michigan and may cross the lake at any time, he said. Wide awake corn growers on this side of the lake are on the lookout for its arrival and are organized for its reception," he said. "You would be surprised to see the quantity of suspected worms that are sent to the agricultural college for identification.

"In its descent down the center of the corn stalk, the borer reaches the stubble just before winter sets in. Nature has provided the corn stubble as a winter home for the borer and in this way provided for its survival. It is the business of man to ... art nature's plan in this particular and to make the survival of the borers in the stubble an impossibility. This can be done by leaving short stubble in cutting

PLENTY OF WORK IS OFFERED POLICEMEN

I'll Keep Them Busy Following "Hunches" Offered in Day's Mail

Fifty-one postcards—a record number—warning of stolen automobiles, a runaway boy and a man wanted for abandonment, were received Friday morning by the Appleton Police department. The cards came from all parts of the middle west, with the larger number from Chicago.

Request for help in the search for a third runaway boy was received from Police Chief F. L. Trostle, Madison. Two other youths were reported Thursday missing from the same source. The last card urges that he be kept for Arthur Fehrmann, 18, who is described as being five feet eight inches tall, and weighing 140 pounds. The youth, who left home Monday night, has a dark complexion and hazel eyes. When last seen he was accompanied by two other men, Arthur Straus and Norbert Thies, in a Ford roadster, bearing Wisconsin license plates B-167,288. The machine was a rebuilt touring car, low black shoes, blue shirt and a light cap or hat. He also carried with him a red sweater and a green and white khaki shirt.

Among the notices of stolen automobiles were:

Chevrolet coach, 1925 model, with motor No. 2118874, stolen July 12 from Milwaukee. A reward of $25 is offered for recovery of the automobile.

A 1925 model Chevrolet touring car, serial No. 21K28856, motor No. 1729562 and Wisconsin license C3456, which was stolen July 13 from Richfield. The car was of a blue duco finish and had a slight dent in the right rear fender.

A reward of $25 is offered for recovery of a Ford roadster, 1927 model, bearing license plates B220973, which was stolen July 2 from Eau Claire.

A Chevrolet coach was stolen July 11 from Green Bay. The automobile, a 1925 model, bore license B75671. A reward of $25 is offered for its recovery.

Chief Walter H. Wagner of Sheboygan, gave notice of a missing Chrysler sedan, taken from that city July 4, and offered a $25 reward for its return. The machine bore Wisconsin license D44-713, serial No. YS.

Strover of the Third ward topped the title in the 20-yard backstroke race with Do Young of the Fourth ward second and Neller of the Fourth ward third.

The candle race in which the contestants must carry a lighted candle in their mouths and swim the length of the pool was won by Strover of the Third ward with Gochauer of the Fifth ward second and H. Gainer of the Third ward third.

The pigeon race was won by Neller of the Fourth ward, Gainer of the Fifth ward was second and Van Ryzin of the Third ward took third honors.

In this race the boys lined up on the side of the pool, jumped into the water and climbed into position on the other side. The last one over was eliminated in each dive until only one man was left. The relay race was won by the Third ward followed by the Sixth ward and the Fourth ward.

Individual honors of the evening were won by Jim Neller representing the Fourth ward when he copped off 11 points. Strover of the Third ward and Marston of the Sixth tied for second individual honors with 10 points each and H. Gainer of the Fourth ward was third high man with 7 points.

Next week the girls under 16 years of age from the various playgrounds will put on a tournament.

SENATE ADVANCES WATER POWER BILL

Measure Designed to Amend Constitution to Permit State to Own Waterpower

MADISON—(UPI)—The Reis "water power resolution" was advanced another step toward a vote upon it by the people, when the assembly Thursday hurried it from third reading to adoption under suspension of rules.

The resolution would amend the constitution, after another session of the legislature has adopted it and the electorate has approved it, so that the state might acquire and maintain water power plants. The vote on adoption by the lower house was 72 to 15. It now goes to the senate.

The assembly refused to reconsider Senator Schumann's bill for the appointment of an interim committee to investigate agricultural problems in the state. The lower house had non-concurred in the bill a few days ago.

Increased indemnities for farmers whose cattle are slaughtered on tests for bovine tuberculosis were voted by the assembly in concurring with the senate on Senator Goodland's bill to that effect.

The assembly refused to reconsider the indefinitely postponed bill for bonding of books in accordance with their deposits to protect the depositors.

The Boldt bill, introduced for the interim committee, exempting cheese and tobacco in the hands of the producers from taxation was amended in one of the clauses pertaining to tobacco and the Knutke bill relating to establishment of a fish hatchery in Langlade county was ordered engrossed and read a third time.

HEAVY CROP OF WEEDS KEEPS CITY CREW BUSY

Appleton is experiencing its heaviest "crop" of weeds this summer in many years, but few complaints have been received from citizens, because the street department is cutting them as quickly as possible, according to R. F. Hackworth, street commissioner. A property owner is given a week's notice to cut the weeds on his property and if he fails in that time the department takes care of the work, charging the owner $1.50 a lot.

NEED ANOTHER POOL
BUT CITY HASN'T MONEY ENOUGH NOW

Mayor Agrees Municipality Should Give Larger Bathing Facilities

Appleton may have a second swimming pool next summer but the city cannot afford to build a pool this year, Mayor A. C. Ruff said when he was asked about a suggestion a second swimming pool be built in the river south of Pierce park. The pool could be built in the river and filled with water from the city watermain which extends to about half a block from the place, it was said.

The present pool near the water plant is not large enough. It was indicated last week during the hot weather. Children were lined up ten and 12 deep on the hill near the pool waiting their turn to swim. Only 200 persons can swim in the pool at one time, and they are allotted one hour when there are others waiting. Girls and boys may not swim on the same day, but where there were two pools, the girls could have one and the boys the other, one person suggested.

In the eight or nine years since the present pool was built there has not been a drowning there, Mayor Ruff said. When children swam in the river there were as many as three and four drownings a year. Parents here are afraid the children will slip off to the river where it is not safe for them, if another pool is not provided.

Mayor Ruff agreed that the city needs another pool but he believes the city cannot afford to spend the money this summer. He ventured that perhaps another year it would be possible.

EXPECT 6,000 AT LEGION CONCLAVE

Record Breaking Attendance
Is Looked for at Marinette Meeting

Hanford MacNider, assistant secretary of war and past national commander of the American Legion has signified his intention of being at the annual state convention Aug. 13-19-20 at Marinette according to word received here by Legion authorities. Invitations also have been extended to Governor Zimmerman, Vice-president Charles G. Dawes, and Charles Lindbergh.

The convention this year is expected to be the largest in the history of the state organization because the national convention is being held in Paris. Many of the posts which would ordinarily send their delegates and members to the national convention in preference to the state meeting are expected to help swell the attendance. Over 6,000 legionnaires are expected.

One Johnstone post of the American Legion is entitled to another delegate with the signing of its six hundredth member. According to the apportionment of delegates one delegate is allowed each post and another is allowed for every one hundred members. Under this ruling Appleton will send seven delegates to the convention.

PRIZES GUN WHICH SAVED LIFE OF NOTED EXPLORER

Madison—(CP)—A five-chamber repeating gun, said to have saved the life of David Livingston in the wilds of the Congo jungles, is in the possession of a Madison man.

Seventy-five years ago, according to Charles W. Piper, owner of the weapon, it was raised to the shoulder of an Englishman to drop a charging elephant in his tracks. Livingston and a small group of white men were in the path of the infuriated beast, natives having fled in terror.

The gun went with Livingston on his first African expedition in 1841. Mr. Piper said, followed him on his trans-continental explorations of Africa and was at his side when Stanley found Livingston slowly dying at Ujiji. When Livingston died at Hala it passed into the hands of one of his retainers.

Mr. Piper, who came to America from England six years ago, purchased the gun from an antique dealer at Okehampton, in Devonshire, for 15 shillings or about $3 in American money. The antique dealer, so he said, had found it in a side-street shop in Cairo, Egypt.

Various museums have offered to buy the gun, according to Mr. Piper but he has no intentions of parting with it. It was manufactured by the Colt Co., in Nov. 30, 1850.

Baking Soda Solution Is Home Remedy For Hives

Madison — The annual season for "hives" is at its height in Wisconsin. This is a disturbance which manifests itself in the skin of apparently healthy persons causing itching and irritating swellings. Relief is often obtained by simple rules. A strong solution of baking soda will help to relieve the sting or the itching "hives" declares a bulletin issued by the State Medical Society today. Hives are more common at this time of the year than at any other, sometimes due to the fruits one eats.

The symptoms consist of "wheals" upon the skin, or in other words slightly raised red swellings with pale centers. These may be of any size, and in pronounced cases a single "wheel" may cover a large portion of the body. A mosquito bite with its white center is a small type of this skin manifestation. There is likely to be a very considerable number of these "wheals" at one time in an attack. The itching from them is extremely troublesome, and the more they are scratched the worse they become. Each individual "wheel" is likely to last but a short time and new ones appear.

"The causes of hives are many," declares the bulletin. "It usually occurs from some foreign substance introduced into the circulation. The majority of cases come from food substances absorbed from the digestive tract, and which do not agree with the patient, or against which the system rebels because of a personal idiosyncrasy."

Many persons, for example, are said to have a special susceptibility to hives upon taking a certain drug or some foodstuff like strawberries or shellfish. If one has repeated attacks of hives following eating one particular kind of food, the diagnosis is easy as to what caused the attack. Many times, however, the cause is not easy to discover for there are individuals who react to such common foods as white of eggs, cakes, custards, etc. People, therefore, who are subject to frequent attacks should recall the food articles consumed prior to an attack in order that they may eventually determine the cause by exclusion.

"Sometimes external irritants produce hives, and it is occasionally due to specific disease conditions in the body," declares the bulletin of the Medical Society. "The cure of an attack of hives is usually simple. It consists of a quick and complete cleansing of the digestive tract by a laxative or cathartic medicine.

"As a domestic remedy for itching, a strong solution of baking soda applied to the skin, allowing it to dry and not wiping it off, is useful. Spirit of camphor may be applied for itching in hives caused by insect bites.

"At the present time physicians have certain tests applicable to the skin which may determine the nature of the foreign substance causing the trouble. If there is any question about the cause, or if one does not obtain prompt relief from these simple domestic remedies, the family physician should be consulted."

COMMON SENSE IN DISARMAMENT

In considering the problem of naval disarmament it is not improbable that too much emphasis has been placed at Geneva on the mathematical calculations of experts just as has been the case in this country with our large navy advocates in deplored an apparent disparity on paper of capital ships as between Great Britain and the United States. Many things enter into the relative strength of navies besides tonnage and guns. The place where battles are likely to be fought, nearness or remoteness to bases of supplies, personnel of officers and crews, attitude of neutrals and the parts to be played by merchant vessels, aircraft, etc., may have even a greater influence on the result than parity or disparity of warcraft as estimated by the experts.

We should not forget that we outdid England in one war on water when our navy on paper was an insignificant match for a formidable and world-famous fleet. It seems to us also that the size and powers of navies with respect to parity, should take into account the possibilities for enduring peace as between the principals.

The so-called parity should be based on the assumption that there will be no war. This is the very essence of disarmament whether on land or sea. Unless it is approached in this spirit it is exceedingly difficult to agree upon definite military limitations, because the idea is always uppermost in the minds of the negotiators that they are matching one force against another. In other words, there is abundant room for the use of common sense rather than expert calculations in reaching conclusions touching disarmament. We think some of this common sense could be injected into the Geneva conference with benefit both to the cause and to the relations of all parties concerned. If they expect war in the future, that is an assumption which calls for a particular policy; but if they expect peace, then that is a proposition which calls for an altogether different policy. If disarmament does not rest on peace expectancy there can be no sound basis for approaching it, for in that case each nation must be guided by self-interest, and this necessarily presupposes power to defeat an adversary. The conference at Geneva is a test of purpose and good faith rather than of expert mathematics.

THE CONSERVATION BILL

At least one major piece of legislation is to be marked up to the credit of an otherwise lengthy and empty session. The bill providing for a complete reorganization of the state conservation system to provide for a non-salaried body of six members, has been finally passed and goes to the governor, who will sign it. As a result of this law we should begin a new era of regulating wild life and natural assets that will mean for the first time something like genuine conservation. It offers an opportunity to take conservation out of politics and put it on an effective basis. It can hardly fail to bring about an improvement.

Two other important subjects remain to be dealt with, one of which is taxation. There will be no revision of the tax laws affecting rates or methods, but the legislature can authorize the appointment of a representative and competent committee to make disinterested investigation of the whole subject of taxation. The third duty of the legislature is to provide for reorganization of state administration and for a budget system, consolidation and elimination of useless boards, commissions, etc., and the introduction of genuine economy into state government.

PARKS AND POLITICS

The senate has rejected Wisconsin's million dollar park extension program by a vote of 17 to 13. The final test will come with action on individual bills, each carrying out a part of the provisions of the main bill. The proposed legislation would have established four additional state parks, Northern Lakes park, Price and Sawyer counties, $350,000; Seven Pines park, Polk county, $200,000; and a park area on Lake Michigan, $200,000.

We believe every citizen of Wisconsin would like to see an extension of public parks and playgrounds. We believe the people of Wisconsin would like to conserve for future generations large domains which are in something like a virgin state and whose natural beauty and facilities for recreation and rest are conspicuously attractive.

The objection to the projects voted down is that they invite another increment to the already heavy tax burden. The people are not in a frame of mind to endorse fresh tax levies when they are convinced that the state is extravagantly governed and that millions of dollars are either wasted annually or go to oil political machinery and fatten the purses of political sinecurists. They know that such undertakings as park extensions could and should be taken care of without additional taxation, that if the policy of economy, bureau and board consolidation and business conduct of state affairs were inaugurated and carried out honestly and efficiently, there would be plenty of money to engage in these public works at even lower taxes.

ACCIDENTAL DROWNING

The statistics on accidental drownings every summer are depressing as reflecting the carelessness of people in general. Deaths from this cause increased 25 per cent among eighteen million policy holders of a large insurance company between January 1 and June 18 of this year, when compared with deaths from this cause for the same period of 1926, an announcement states. This year's rate is also higher than for the same period of 1925.

An examination of the statistics of this company show that although the general tendency of the mortality rate for accidental drowning has been downward during the recent years, the rise in 1927 makes it very timely that attention be called to the fact that with the coming of warm weather the drownings are sure to show a still further increase, with young men and boys as the principal victims.

In fact this form of accidental death has a distinct seasonal aspect. July, August and September being the peak months because of the increased indulgence in water sports at the various resorts. Too many of these deaths are the result of carelessness.

What is needed is a wider application of the principles and practice of water safety which are advocated by the life saving division of the American Red Cross. These are now being generally taught in thousands of summer camps which are attended by boys and girls, and in the end go far to reduce deaths from this cause.

Meanwhile, however, some effort should be made to reach the young persons beyond the camp age and some way found to warn them of the danger of being careless while in or near the water.

OLD MASTERS

We, the Fairies, blithe and antic,
Of dimensions not gigantic,
Though the moonshine mostly keep us,
Off in orchards frisk and peep us.
Stolen sweets are always sweeter,
Stolen kisses much completer,
Stolen looks are nice in chapels,
Stolen, stolen be your apples.

When to bed the world is bobbing,
Then's the time for orchard robbing;
Yet the fruit were scarce worth stealing
Were it not for stealing, stealing.
—Translated by Leigh Hunt from the Latin of Thomas Randolph.

Lloyd George rises from obscurity to remark that not more than 200 of the 700 members of the House of Lords have sufficient mental capacity to administer government. Great Britain certainly has been playing in luck of late.

The good burmester of Cologne told visitors the United States was the only nation able to give Europe eternal peace. Still it would be quite a job to kill them all off.

Now that the flood refugees have gone back home, the country is heaving a sigh of content. One of the reasons why the flood refugee's real trouble began when he quite left one.

HOW THE MODEL FAT BOY CAME BACK

At the age 47, height 68 inches, the model fat boy weighed 191 pounds, yet still passed a life insurance examination readily enough and had no particular complaint. Being a model boy he had had enough concern over his 20 per cent excess weight to undergo a health examination, and this disclosed that the model fat boy could hold his breath 31 seconds, whereas about ten years earlier when the fat boy had been a better man he had readily held out 50 seconds.

Now 31 seconds wasn't bad, at that. A lot of spry old geezers of 55 or 60 who think they're some pumpkins when it comes to a question of health, can scarcely hold out for 50 seconds. They're just drifting along without any reserve to speak of, in time of emergency, or distress such as pneumonia, appendicitis or typhoid fever, as you might say, for the stellar role in one of those favorite newspaper stories—Mr. Stark had seemed in the best of health and the news is a great shock to his many friends. They recall the summit 10 or 20 years too soon, these gamblers who laugh at doctors and their health rules, and when they come down they crash.

Mulling over in his mind this slight shortness of oxygen reserve, the model fat boy recalled a few things he had endeavored to ignore. One was that he seemed inclined to puff and blow more on trifling effort than he formerly did. Another was that he was frequently annoyed by momentary dizziness on suddenly standing from a sitting or reclining posture or on other occasions that formerly caused no dizziness. A third point brought out by some of the leading questions of the health examination was that the model had grown just a bit grouchy or crabbed in the last few years; some of his friends had rallied him about this and his wife and family had commented on it; it seemed to be the general depression that the model's former sunny and happy disposition had changed for the worse. Not important in itself, yet it fits in with the picture.

Well, not to frighten the fat boy, the doctor assured him he wasn't downright obese, had nothing akin to a "breakdown," and needed nothing more than a little regulation of his mode of life. It was clearly evident, the doctor said, that there was some imbalance in the fat boy's scheme, and this the doctor proceeded to adjust.

Now the first "indication" was for the fat boy to reduce. And the simplest and safest way one can reduce is by going back along the same trail that led to obesity. It didn't take much questioning to show that the fat boy had gained his burden in the conventional way—overeating and underworking. That's how 99 out of a hundred fat folks get that way. It is so simple that it hurts to acknowledge it, but it is the truth.

The fat boy had formerly indulged in a fair amount of daily exercise, but in recent years he had kidded himself along with the excuse that he was too busy to get his daily exercise. Then, too, he had a fixed habit, a healthful habit for younger persons and skinnier folk, of eating a late lunch every night. This lunch seemed to interest the doctor a good deal. Next visit we'll assay it and see just what it is worth in the fat boy's metabolism.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Cross Eye

What do you advise about an operation for cross eyes? Has this anything to do with the sight in case the operation is not successful? Do you think the — clinics is a good place to have this done? (M. M.)

Answer—When such an operation fails it is a disappointment but in no wise injures eyesight. The place you mention is as good as any other place, but the surgeon who will be assigned to operate on you there is no better than the eye surgeons in your own home town. An advantage in having such an operation done at home is that you can keep an eye on the surgeon for years afterward—a continuing influence in case he makes a batch of the job. Indeed that is one reason for "clinics"—the impersonal title affords an alibi for the doctors employed there. Some clinics are fairly good. I'd patronize 'em myself if I couldn't afford to consult a physician or specialist privately. But some are pretty bad, and often the bad ones are the most skillful advertisers.

Acknowledging the Corn

On the labels of cheap grades of jams and preserves the words corn syrup, corn sugar or pectin are printed. What are these? Is such jam good for children? (Mrs. L. W.)

Answer—Corn syrup or corn sugar is glucose, and it is as good a food as cane sugar or fruit sugar for children. But why not buy corn syrup and flavor it with the fruit yourself? That would be far better than feeding the "imitation strawberry jam" mentioned on the label you inquired.

LIBRARY ADVENTURES

By Arnold Mulder

EMERSON AS A LIBRARY CRITIC

Emerson said somewhere, if I remember correctly, that whenever a new book was published he read an old one. At another time he gave the new book to a friend and advised him to read it again.

He did not seem to have suspected that Emerson was a very great poet.

He was sometimes unreliable about individual poems. Here is an entry for 1842: "Abou ben Adhem seems to promise its own immortality beyond all the contemporary poems."

Now, while "Abou" is a very pleasant poem and is invariably quoted by people making a speech at a Knights of Pythias banquet, Emerson's praise is surely far too extravagant.

Carlyle, as is well known, was his contemporary literary god. Not that he swallowed Carlyle whole; he was ready to separate the wheat from the chaff in his hero and he considered him a greater talker than writer. But on the whole he felt that Carlyle was one of the great geniuses of his time.

There was great spiritual sympathy between the two men and that may be the reason why Emerson was as just to Carlyle as he was. They understood each other and Emerson's estimate of the Englishman is in reasonable agreement with the verdict that time has made on him.

I suspect he felt that way about Hawthorne because the author of "The Scarlet Letter" worked in a medium that Emerson did not understand. Emerson was the essayist first, last, and all the time. He was essayist even in his poems. He dealt in the compressed thought, the aphorism, the doing up of ideas into the smallest possible bundles. Hawthorne was the novelist, who did not deal with general principles but with human character as it expressed itself in life and action. Emerson was so close to him that he did not estimate his greatness at its true value. It is probably safe to say that today we regard Hawthorne as being in his medium as great as Emerson was in his.

Tennyson was farther removed from Emerson in space and the American "placed" the English poet about where in a general way he is today regarded as belonging. A great deal of Tennyson he regarded as negligible, while a small body of his work won his approval as great, chief among it "Ulysses". The "In Memoriam" he regarded as little more than an exercise in versification. Criticism of today does not agree with all of that but Emerson's estimate is near enough to the verdict of time to make it remarkably interesting.

He says very little about Browning but he does not seem to think much of him. Which is rather remarkable in view of the fact that Browning's compression of thought is a good deal like Emerson's. He does not seem to have suspected that Browning was a very great poet.

Jungle Breath

by Ben Lucien Burman

THIS HAS HAPPENED
LINCOLN NUNNALLY, elderly American chemist, is summoned to the little jungle-bordered town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil, by his young friend, VILAK, who is concerned for the safety of his beautiful cousin, ELSIE MARBERY, owner of a coffee plantation and other property near Porto Verde.

Vilak believes GAYLORD PRENTISS, a reticent and forbidding man, known to be an enemy of Elsie, may be involved some way in the deaths. Accordingly, he and Nunnally set out for Prentiss' house, which is guarded by barbed wire fences and a vicious dog. Elsie insists on joining them; Prentiss sets the dog on them and Vilak saves his companions' lives by chloroforming it unconsciousness.

The next day Elsie's two-year-old orphaned nephew is kidnapped. Vilak finds the trail and in a few hours they come upon the child, deserted by its captors, and being cared for by a gang of railroad workers. Returning with the baby, Vilak gravely tells Elsie he has bad news for her.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

"Bad news?" Anxiety was evident in Elsie's voice. "The old man, too, who had been bent over in his saddle so absorbed that to the passer-by he must have seemed asleep, looked up with a start."

"I hate to be a kill-joy just when you are so happy," said Vilak. "But if you want to keep on being happy you'll get Tinky away from here as quickly as you can. Take the boat that leaves here next week."

Her dark lips tightened. "What do you mean?"

"Persons don't steal babies merely for the fun of dropping them on the ground. I don't know just what happened this afternoon, but as I told you I have a theory. And that theory prompts me to the certain belief that Tinky will not be safe until he is far from Porto Verde."

She gazed directly into his keen blue eyes. "You're not telling me that merely to make me leave?"

"No."

She hesitated. "Very well. I'll take him away. When the boat comes next Thursday, But as soon as I have put him somewhere where he'll be safe I'll come back. I personally will not stay away from Porto Verde. No matter what happens. I belong here."

"If a person happened to own an active volcano, he wouldn't necessarily be called upon to live inside its crater. I tell you again that your life is in danger every moment here and the dangers are increasing constantly. This affair of Tinky's may be just a development of that. I don't know. But I've given up arguing with you. My only regret is that there is no way of getting you out of here before Thursday."

It was dusk when they neared the fazenda and the two spreading castanho trees marking the entrance already had begun their melodious whistling in the evening breeze.

"I don't like those Indians. Er . . . Indians," the old man remarked suddenly, after half an hour's silence.

Vilak looked at him amusingly.

"What Indians, Nanny?"

"Those half breed and Indian laborers who work for er . . . D'Albentara. Not nice faces, Vilak. Not nice. Er . . . ratty. And that foreman with the big nose is ugly as a . . . a . . . er . . . er . . . he's ugly. How can a nice fellow like D'Albentara live with them? It would put my health completely out of order . . . yes, quite completely."

"You can't saw down a tree with a razor blade," Vilak responded. "Section hands aren't housemaids. D'Albentara takes what he can get."

"Which reminds me that I've got to do something for him to show my appreciation," Elsie put in. "What'll I send him?"

"A little er . . . wine is always welcome," the old man answered.

"An excellent idea. Mr. Nunnally, I'll send him over a case of my best champagne, that Pommeray 1912, and some other wine for the men. They'll all be glad to get a change from the dreadful stuff they drink here all the time. Better for them, too. If Vilak will be good enough to take it over to them after dinner I'd be awful grateful."

"I'll be delighted," Vilak responded. "I have a particular reason for wanting to go back anyway."

After dark the two men set out on their horses again. Behind them rode one of Elsie's ebony-faced servants, driving a little cart which contained one of the heavy stone jars used to transport wine in the region and a wooden case from whose cracks peeped fragrant wisps of straw. They reached the camp and delivered the presents.

D'Albentara was highly pleased. Giving the jar of wine to his foreman to be distributed judicially among the men, he opened a bottle of the champaña and drank the health first of Elsie, then of his guests. They chatted about engineering, chemistry, the competition of the Brazilian railroads with the steam boats and the question of which would eventually win out, the value of the jungle land when an overpopulated world would have to reach out for new fields to supply its workers, the myriad motley subjects that any three men of scientific instincts would talk about with a jungle encircling them.

As they chatted, the Indian and half-breed laborers who had ceased their work for the night also talked and sat around the crackling fire and noisily drank the heady wine out of their battered tin cups. But the old man could not understand their loud, sometimes-shouted conversation for when it was not an Indian dialect, it was usually some perverted Portuguese patois of which he knew nothing.

The conversation of the white men finally drifted to the repairs on which D'Albentara was engaged. Vilak inquired whether he might see how they were proceeding with the fill where the river had cut dangerously into the banks. The engineer gladly assented. Calling over his foreman of the enormous nose, whose breath now reeked strongly of wine, they walked toward the river's edge. Here the soil was wetter and marshier than elsewhere and the stones which occasionally appeared above it were covered with a thick slime which made walking very difficult.

They had gone only a few yards when Vilak, usually so agile, slipped on one of these stones and pitched forward. Grasping for support, he caught the hand of D'Albentara, who was at one side, and the arm of the foreman who was at the other. But the movement did not check his fall. Instead it brought the foreman sprawling on the ground as well. Vilak was the first to gain his feet. He aided the foreman to arise and began brushing off his clothes. "Terribly sorry," he murmured apologetically.

"Look at this," Vilak responded. He withdrew a small object from his pocket and flashed his light upon it so that the other might see. It was a ring, consisting of a thin gold band, set with a large black stone. The stone was carved in the fashion of so much of the jewelry seen in the remoter parts of the globe. "I don't know what the devil made me so awkward."

The half breed's shifting eyes glared angrily a moment. His dwarfed, knotted fingers seemed to start to the knif at his belt, then he smiled and gave an affable grunt.

"Tacos does not mind," D'Albentara murmured as Vilak still sought to repair the damage he had wrought. "it is nothing. All that goes up must also fall down. Is that not so? Once I heard an English sailor say this. And it is true."

The incident forgotten, they strolled on to the tracks where the engineer explained in detail how the piles were driven, a retaining wall built of rocks, and earth piled into the vacant spaces between. Half an hour later the two visitors made ready to leave. The Indians and half breeds still sat around the fire drinking and shouting more lustily than ever.

"One or two of them look as though they might be getting a tiny bit tipsy," Vilak declared to the engineer, as they shook hands. "I hope Senhorita Marberry's wine isn't going to have any bad effects."

D'Albentara laughed. "Have no fear of that, amigos. The stomachs of my men ate as iron. Good night."

They walked toward the road. "I feel proud. Quite a . . . proud," the old man declared, as they plodded through the marshy turb. "You fell and I . . . didn't."

Vilak chuckled. "Sorry to put a pin in the bubble of your self flattery, Nanny. But it happens that I slipped purposely in order to pull our Indian friend, the foreman, down with me."

The old man looked bewildered. "But why should you want to do . . . such a thing? You almost ruined your suit."

"Look at this," Vilak responded. He withdrew a small object from his pocket and flashed his light upon it so that the other might see. It was a ring, consisting of a thin gold band, set with a large black stone. The stone was carved in the fashion of so much of the jewelry seen in the remoter parts of the globe. President Stops Sale Of Nails From White House

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington — You may have read in the newspapers that workmen engaged in repairing the temporary White House were selling nails from the torn-out sections to the souvenir hunters.

Well, President Coolidge picked up the morning paper and read about the nail selling and his method of stopping this commerce was to bar all ordinary citizens from the grounds, although he himself was then still living at the temporary White House on Dupont Circle.

Upon the operation of putting a new roof on the White House and otherwise improving its safety and comfort.

But President Coolidge picked up the morning paper and read about the nail selling and his method of stopping this commerce was to bar all ordinary citizens from the grounds, although he himself was then still living at the temporary White House on Dupont Circle.

The sequence of cause and effect has just come to light. It appears that not only a handful of nails was sold, but now the workmen are deprived of the opportunity to make a few quarters and first-time visitors to Washington are denied a closeup of the White House and its alteration.

The business of keeping American citizens off their government's property is nothing new. It's done every day in many instances. One of the most extreme examples was the conduct of Admiral John D. McDonald, commander of the Pearl Harbor naval base at Honolulu, in barring photographers, newspapermen and everyone else from a glimpse of the plane of Pilot Grace as it prepared for a flight to San Francisco.

McDonald is known as one of the most hard-boiled officers in the navy and his martinet characteristics have not diminished with the approach of his retirement. All officers and men entering the gates are searched for liquor or dope and the violator of any rule may expect scant sympathy from the commandant.

The navy has issued a standing general order permitting photographers to make pictures of subjects "which show to the public the work of the navy," but an effective censorship on anything the navy doesn't want the public to see is provided for in the order. This censorship is especially imposed when photographers seek pictures of wrecks of navy airplanes—which have been so frequently as to permit Col. Billy Mitchell to devise the motto "Join the Naval Aviation and see the next world." It is explained that it isn't a good thing to have the public see pictures of such wrecks.

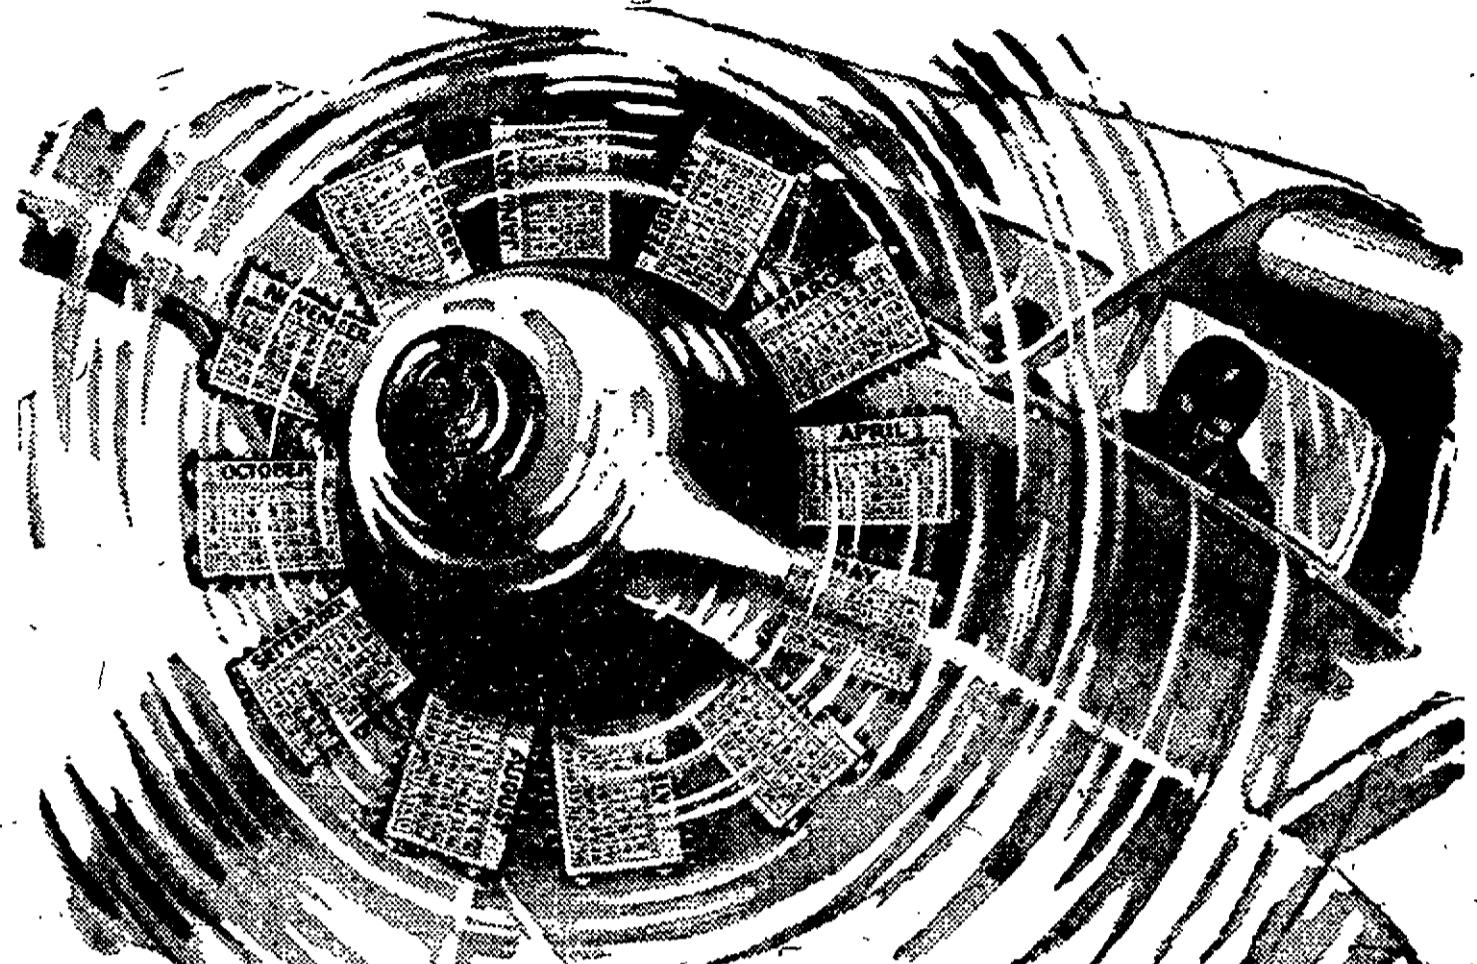

Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur is an advocate of some forms of censorship.

WANT CONGRESSMAN TO ATTEND TRADE MEETING

Congressman George J. Schneider received an invitation Thursday to attend the fifth annual convention of the Pacific Foreign Trade Council which will be held on Sept. 15, 16 and 17 at Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. The invitation is from J. S. MacLean, acting prime minister of the Province of British Columbia, who stated that the session will be an international conference of business delegates from the principal foreign countries. It will be especially important to the development of international trade, he said.

Continuously—

In mind and deed the whole world is set a-wing — and by a single element.

Through continuous delivery of power, absolute and unwavering, a new-era motor has supplied the final all-decisive factor for air victory.

Mechanical continuity, as against variability and uncertainty! If so vital in one field of conquest, ask yourself if it does not — must not — apply in major degree to the satisfactory and correct operation of your own automobile motor.

Wadham's 370

The Year-Round Gasoline

S.G.—32

was founded on recognition of the mechanical importance to automobile motors of uniformity — continuity — always-the-sameness. Its high specifications were set not to make it a gas with easy starting qualities for winter but to make it your most profitable, efficient gas for every-month-of-the-year use.

Its easy-starting therefore is not a primary but a secondary quality, growing as a matter of course out of its fundamental purpose of bringing the most out of your motor all the time.

Recognize the importance of continuity. Sensibly check up on what you know about motors and ask if there is a single high quality needed for one season of the year that should not be working for you in the period when you give your car its hardest use.

370 is the year-round gas. Use it — continuously!

TOWNSPREDICT GOOD BEAN AND CABBAGE CROP
FOR THIS SEASONPresident of New London
Canning Company Declares
Big Harvest in Sight

New London—According to Emil Hamilton president of the Hamilton Canning company, this year's bean and cabbage crop will harvest nearly 100 per cent unless something unfortunate happens.

The Hamilton company planted 50 acres of land in beans. The tract will be offered to women and children for picking, the beans being bought from the pickers by the company. They have also contracted for 60 acres making a total of 110 which will be canned by the company this year.

One hundred and eighty acres of cabbage have also been contracted for, which with the 150 acres of their own planting totals 330 acres of cabbage which will be made into kraut this year.

"On the contrary," Mr. Hamilton said, "the pickle crop is poor, probably due to the late season and the excessive rain." Eighty acres of cucumbers have been planted, but it is expected that only a small percentage will be usable for pickling.

The company will employ more hands than in previous years due to the fast growing demand for their output. A force of over 250 are needed to take care of this season's crop.

Two new sheds have been erected during the summer, one, 50 by 50 feet, will be used to house more kraut tanks. The other 50 by 70 feet will be used as a storage shed.

DUTAGAMIE-CO HAS BIG DELEGATION AT ROAD SCHOOL

Highway Experts Hear Addresses on Outdoor Advertising and Snow Removal

Outagamie-co had the largest number of highway workers and officials at the divisional road school at Green Bay, according to registration figures. Sixty out of a total of 345 persons present Wednesday were from this county.

Danger of advertising signs along public highways was stressed at Wednesday's meeting, while snow removal also came in for a large part of the discussion.

Speakers were D. F. Culbertson, Green Bay, C. N. Maurer, state traffic engineer, and J. A. Stransky, assistant engineer of Division 2. N. M. Isabella, state maintenance engineer, had been slated to discuss the "Future of Maintenance," but owing to the fact that he was not able to get here, the time was divided between Mr. Culbertson and "Jack" Chambers, Milwaukee. The latter broke the monotony of the meeting by telling a group of humorous stories.

REVOLVING SIGN ILLEGAL

Under the laws of Wisconsin, Mr. Maurer said, advertising signs within the limits of the highway right-of-way are not permitted and it is the duty of those men who are constantly in touch with stretches of highway to see that there are no violations of these laws. Signs that are placed at dangerous curves in such a position that they might, in any way, obstruct the view of those traveling the road, are most emphatically against the law and Mr. Maurer urged that the patrolmen, seeing these signs, either remove them or notify the state traffic department and the matter would be attended to.

One type of sign that has also become illegal in the recent law changes, Mr. Maurer said, is the type that usually placed along side the road outside the highway right-of-way limits is the revolving sign. These signs are set up in such a manner as to catch the wind, revolving on a windmill principle. These signs, moving as they do, it was said, are believed to take the motorists' attention from the road so as to impair his own safety and the safety of others.

DISCUSS SNOW REMOVAL

The problem of snow removal is also an important one, and J. A. Stransky, assistant division engineer of Division 2, advocated strongly the use of snow-fences. Snow drift prevention was his creed, Mr. Stransky said, and snow drift removal. Snow fences, he said, would be a great help on almost any stretch of highway.

"You will notice that snow does not drift seriously when woods come up to the road on both sides," said the speaker. "This is a fact because the trees break the wind and keep the drifts down. Where the country is open the wind is broken by means of fences and gates, etc., and a snow fence is a great help."

ATTENDANCE REPORT

D. F. Culbertson told a few facts as to the possibility of less expense in surfacing roads in the future with new materials that will undoubtedly come out. His talk was interesting, even though unexpected and brief.

There were 245 men from this district at the meeting and the circuit court room was packed most of the day. The record of the attendance was as follows:

Brown Co. 16; Calumet, 35; Door, 18; Keweenaw, 26; Manitowoc, 27; Marinette, 30; Oconto, 30; Outagamie, 50; Shawano, 50; Winnebago, 13; Koshkonon Reservation, 3. Other attendants, 4; total 315; not registered, 30; grand total 345.

STAGE And SCREEN

SERVICE FOR LADIES*

Based on Ernest Vjada's original screen story, written expressly for him, Adolph Menjou's Paramount presents "Service for Ladies" arriving at Fischer's Appleton Theatre Saturday and Sunday is another of those polished comedy-dramas that have made the Menjou name one to conjure with in entertainment circles.

The story opens in Paris at the Ritz, where Albert Leroux is absolute master of the exclusive dining room. To this hotel comes Elizabeth Foster, an American heiress and her millionaire father.

Albert falls madly in love. When he learns that the Fosters are leaving for an exclusive winter resort in the Swiss Alps he demands a vacation and boards the same train.

At the Alpine resort, Albert learns that King Boris of Lucania is also a guest. At breakfast the morning of their arrival, Albert, the first one down, is concealed behind his paper when the Fosters enter. Elizabeth seats herself so that she faces him. Over the top of his paper he catches her eye just as the King enters.

Boris urges Albert to join him at breakfast. This places Albert with his back to Elizabeth, so close that their chairs touch. Boris comments sotto voce that he is travelling incognito to which Albert replies "So am I." The import of this is not lost upon the Fosters. They start wondering who Albert can be. The conclusion of the Fosters come to regarding Albert are heightened by the fact that during the brilliant round of winter sports that follow in which Albert and Elizabeth are thrown into an intimate contact which soon ripens into reciprocated love. Albert appears at an ice carnival and masquerades in a gorgeous costume.

Elizabeth is more than ever impressed with the fact that he must be somebody and jumps to the conclusion, when Albert, realizing the barrier of his profession, states despairingly that

Here Are Facts Not Found In Usual Circus Program

Ever want to ask a lot of questions of somebody or other when you were at the circus? Things that the program didn't tell anything about?

An agent ahead of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus came to town to say that it is to exhibit here Thursday, July 28.

He asked to jot down some odd facts about the Big Show. Here they are:

Travels on 100 railroad cars, made up into four trains.

Out of 150 places visited in a season less than 20 are played for more than one day.

Travels 20,000 miles in a summer. Exhibits more than 1,000 jungle animals, including Pawah, the famed white elephant of Burma.

Carries over 1,600 people on tour all of whom are given three meals each day in the circus dining tents.

Daily expense of show between $15,000 and $16,000.

$50 draught horses carried to move the show.

550 ring-stock horses used in performance.

2,300 stakes driven and pulled each day.

A complete new set of canvas used each spring.

Tents contain 42 miles of rope.

If you could set the elephants on one another's head the topmost would be taller than the Eiffel Tower.

The gulf between them is too great and that they should see no more of each other, that the gulf is one of social stations.

After the carnival, Albert returns to Boris, leaving a note of renunciation. He is back in his role as head waiter when the Fosters likewise return. With the dignity of despair he meets them and conducts them to the table, his manner purely professional, his eyes avoiding hers. Then comes the denouement. The situation is saved by King Boris who bestows upon Albert a controlling interest in the hotel and with it the appointment as general manager. In his new character, Albert no longer feels the gulf between them to be impassable and—well—you'll have to guess the rest.

The import of this is not lost upon the Fosters. They start wondering who Albert can be. The conclusion of the Fosters come to regarding Albert are heightened by the fact that during the brilliant round of winter sports that follow in which Albert and Elizabeth are thrown into an intimate contact which soon ripens into reciprocated love. Albert appears at an ice carnival and masquerades in a gorgeous costume.

Elizabeth is more than ever impressed with the fact that he must be somebody and jumps to the conclusion, when Albert, realizing the barrier of his profession, states despairingly that

HIGHS MAY OPEN 1927 FOOTBALL YEAR WITH WAUPUN SEPT. 24

Basketball Season May Start Before Holidays; New Grid Nearly Ready

Members of Pigskin Squad Spending Summer Getting into Condition

Appleton high school probably will open its 1927 football season on Sept. 24 with Waupun, last year's undefeated champion of the Little Ten conference, according to Principal H. H. Heile. The opening date originally called for a game with Shawano but the northern school asked that the two-year contract be broken. After the drubbing handed Shawano last fall it is believed the school authorities believe Appleton was out of their class.

Negotiations were started immediately with Wausau for the early game. The Rivers and Wausau had the date filled but Wausau was free and negotiations now are being completed to play the Prison city team here if possible, though the local eleven will journey south if the Waupun athletic heads demand it. The game is creating considerable interest not only because of Waupun's 1925 record, but also because Joseph Shields, present Appleton high coach, led the Prison city to a conference championship in 1925, his first and only year there.

Efforts also are being made to schedule three or four pre-season non-conference basketball games for this season. Football ends on Thanksgiving day leaving about a month before the Valley conference court schedule opens. Two weeks of this period are vacation weeks which usually hinder the squad's efforts to get in shape for the opening games. Attempts are being made to schedule Neenah and Kaukauna high schools at least two games. An effort also was made to get a game with Fond du Lac, 1926 valley champions who lost their only game to Appleton. The new round robin schedule leaves Fond du Lac out next year. However, sport authorities of the rival school are opposed to an early game with Appleton so it probably will not be played.

The new athletic field on W. Spencer will soon be ready for the football season. A crop of hay on the field will be cut several times so that a small stubble will remain in September as the basis of a good gridiron. The squad will be transported to the field in busses, going out at 4 and returning at 6 o'clock. This will keep the boys in better condition than "trotting" several blocks over concrete to the field as was the case last year and will prevent accidents which might have occurred to youths who used the railroad tracks last year, school authorities believe.

Coch Shields has loaned footballs to several members of the squad for the summer and many of last year's regulars and promising new men for this fall's eleven may be seen each evening working out at various playgrounds of the city.

HANLEY, NORTHWESTERN RECUPERATING IN WEST

Evanston, Ill.—Coach Dick Hanley, Northwestern's head football mentor is recuperating from his recent appendectomy operation by hunting and fishing in the woods of Wisconsin state. The rugged old leader went to the west coast shortly after leaving the hospital. He plans to return to Evanston Aug. 1 where he will make plans for the summer coaching school to be held here Aug. 17 to 27.

Jack Ryan, a semipro from Menasha, Tenn., has been signed for a trial by the St. Louis Cards.

HE'S GOOD

ALABAMA WILL PLAY WISCONSIN AT CAMP RANDALL ON NOV. 3

Carding of Inter-sectional Game Tops Off 1928 Gridiron Schedule

Madison—All rumors, prophesying a strong inter-sectional football game would appear on Wisconsin's 1928 home schedule, were finally set to rest here Thursday with the announcement that Alabama will journey north to meet the Badgers. Negotiations have been under way for some time with Coach Wallace Wade with the result that Nov. 3, 1928, has been set as the date on which the southerners will appear in Randall stadium here.

The contracts have yet to be approved by the Wisconsin athletic council. This unusual inter-sectional tilt will round out the Cardinal chart in excellent shape, providing three high class contests on the home grounds with Minnesota, Chicago and Alabama, Michigan, Purdue and Iowa will be met abroad.

The scheduling of Alabama, one of the strongest teams in the country last fall, is the initial step in the program of Director George Little and Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite to place the Badgers on a higher grid plane. This contest will be the first of any significant inter-sectional character since 1929, when the Cardinal was trounced by Yale, 6 to 0.

Only once before in Wisconsin football history has a team from Dixie been scheduled. In the year 1912 Arkansas was defeated by the Badgers, 64 to 7. The Wisconsin officials sought to renew the inter-sectional idea in the best style by signing one of the top-notch elevens of the country.

One glance at their record in 1928 indicates that Catcher John Grabowski, when passing bouquets around to the New York Yankees, Grabowski has been a tower of strength to the Husker back of the plate and has borne the brunt of the receiving duties. The ex-White Sox coach has one of the best throwing arms in the majors and is a popular receiver. His hitting borders around the .350 mark.

NOW MR. SHARKEY IS TO LAY OFF TRAINING

Boston Challenger of Ex-champ Fears Being Drawn Too Fine

New York—And now Jack Sharkey has the "rests."

Following Thursday's so-so workout of six rounds in the Madison Square garden gym, it was announced that the Lithuanian would take the morning off, to meditate upon his greatness, or perhaps to go into mourning for what he intends to do that poor old former champion, Jack Dempsey.

The "rests," until now, had been considered a part of training routine strictly confined to Dempsey's camp.

The former champion, who figures to have just so many clouds left to give for his country, naturally had to conserve the supply as much as possible.

And his program of thirty minutes' work, and forty-eight hours' rest, is about as good a plan as any. Then, too, his astute manager, Leo P. Flynn, has a better chance to perform the hocus pocus on the theory that what one has not, will never be missed.

Sharkey, Thursday, devoted his entire time to boxing. He was a little better at it than he has been on any other day of his training. Throughout the rounds that he worked, he was actually artistic in his footwork, and his use of the left hand, apparently his greatest weapon, for keeping a rushing opponent at a safe distance.

The weather, which continues warm to an oppressive degree, gave him a legitimate excuse for knocking off work for a day. It might be possible that Benny Leonard's observation, of the day before, that Sharkey was drawing himself down to fine, had something to do with the decision to take an afternoon off.

The interesting Lithuanian was ready today to take some violent exception to the statements that he was about to do to the boxer who had been named as the opposing maul artist.

One of those so-called "crucial" games will be played at Oshkosh on Sunday. Kimberly will be the visiting team. The Papermakers have slipped a bit of late and, if the Sawdust Tribe should come through with a win the race for top post in the Valley league will be of the blanketed variety.

"Whatever Dempsey does or tries to do, I am going to box him, until I am satisfied that I can't get any place doing that," said Sharkey's comeback. "If you think I'm going to run out there and let them take picks at me, just to show how tough I am, you're damn right."

Saratoga Lake, N. Y.—(O)—Jack Dempsey is undergoing the final test of his ability—whether he can take a Husky punch on the chin and still bore in with senses unimpaired.

The former champion is certain his physical condition is sound, that his punching power is as great as ever and his footwork fast enough to carry the high-powered artillery into close range for heavy work on Jack Sharkey's body. But he realizes that on the day in will be hit hard an often and is anxious to discover his reaction when fists are drumming on his own chin.

In less than a week the former title holder will meet Jack Sharkey in the Yankee Stadium.

Thursday was the first day Jack spent slapping punches with his chin when he could have avoided the punishment. Jack's submission bore the stamp of indecisiveness. It was noticeable that for the first minute of each round he cut loose with an assault that left his workmen in rather exhausted condition. They were then allowed to park right and let hooks on the former champ's chin.

Jackie Stengel plans to participate in races on German soil within the next few weeks.

MUSICAL AMBITIONS

Bruce Jones, captain of the 1928 Alabama football team, will receive a trial by Metro Goldwyn Mayer.

L. S. U. PLANS WINNER

Mike Donahue, L. S. U. State University's football coach, says he will be one of the best in the country next fall.

SAMMY MANDELL'S OPPONENT

PHIL MCGRAW

Here's Phil McGraw who has been able to lure Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, into the ring for a title battle. No sensational knockouts are expected as neither is much of a puncher.

JACK SHARKEY SAYS HE FIGHTS BECAUSE OF LOVE FOR GAME

Boston Sailor Explains How He Feels When in Ring; to Be Fighting Champ

New York—Jack Sharkey is telling a love story.

The scene is in the little dressing room down one flight of steps from the ice pavilion on top of Madison Square Garden. Outside, 1500 fans are gathered around a ring pitched in the center of the rink. They are waiting for the daily afternoon work-out. One can hear the buzz of their conversation filtering through the doorway. Johnny Buckley is perspiring as he tapes his star's precious knuckles. Sharkey? Oh, to be sure, Sharkey is talking.

The Fighting Fonograph—well, here's the love story.

"I love to fight," chatters Sharkey, explaining why fighters get that way. "I always liked a fight."

"The greatest thrill in my life is standing up at the first bell, rubbed, tingling with the massage and stepping forward under the big lights looking for the first opening to put a punch through and wondering if the other fellow will land first."

"It gets you, it does. I love the smell of liniment. The clang of the bell at each round. The cheers and boos of the crowd. The minute rest between rounds. The introductions. The anxiety of waiting for the decision. The thrill of battering your enemy down, of watching his snarling face turn blank under your shots to his ribs and chin, of hearing the 'off' toll the ten count. I love all that, I tell you, and I always will."

"I didn't want to wait until September to fight. I told Tex. If I have to wait until September to fight, I'll be plowed up again. Cincinnati course today is standing up at the first bell, rubbed, tingled with the massage and stepping forward under the big lights looking for the first opening to put a punch through and wondering if the other fellow will land first."

"Bill Kilkenny liked to play the chances of the four clubs in the pennant fight, believes Chicago has by far the best chance to come through."

"Bill Kilkenny, if you have forgotten, for three straight victories over Philadelphia bowed before Clarence Mitchell's south-paw spitballs, 7-3."

The Cleveland Indians stopped an eight game losing streak and the Yanks lost 4-1. Ruth and Gehrig went hitting against Walt Miller's twirls.

Although held to five hits the St. Louis Browns beat Boston 4-2, bunching the blows of Ruffing.

Pittsburg took the third game of the series from Brooklyn, 6-5.

Tony Osborn's pitching gave the Chicago Cubs a 6-1 win over the Boston Braves. Chicago retains its game and a half lead over the Pirates for first place.

The St. Louis Cardinals, after three straight victories over Philadelphia bowed before Clarence Mitchell's south-paw spitballs, 7-3."

The Cleveland Indians stopped an eight game losing streak and the Yanks lost 4-1. Ruth and Gehrig went hitting against Walt Miller's twirls.

"There is a difference between boxing and fighting. I do both. Jack Johnson, for instance, liked to box but he did not like to fight. He was always cautious."

"Jess Willard liked to play the clown and let other fighters swing at him and miss. But he never did like fighting."

"Dempsey made his bouts few and far between and did not seem to be so nuts about getting into a ring. When I am champion I intend to be the fightingest champ the ring has known."

Yesterday A Green Bay Lady Was In Our Store

She is a regular patron of Voecks Bros. and has been for a number of years. When she requires meat that is especially delicious, she drives sixty miles to be sure that she is getting the best that can be had.

This is not an unusual happening at Voecks Bros. We have many regular patrons in Oshkosh, Green Bay, Neenah and other surrounding towns. They travel to Voecks Bros. because the quality of their meat stands undisputed for over a quarter of a century.

"C'est vous"

A dangerous waltz in the modern French style, with interesting instrumental effects. The refrain carries a phrase or two of "dough-boy French" (easily understood). It's a good dance rhythm for warm summer nights. The other numbers listed below are equally pleasing. Come in and hear all of them—today!

JACK LOCKWILL'S POLICE DOG

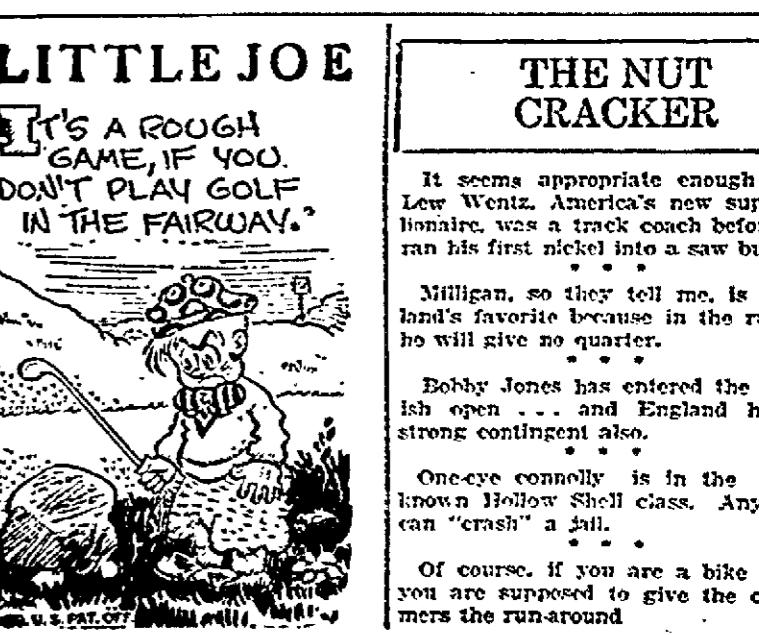

The dog had started to follow the girl, but he halted in doubt when he saw Jack wasn't coming. "Come, Thor, old fellow," Jack called. The animal returned at once, placed himself "at heel," and walked steadily behind his new master back to Ivor's Loss. Jack took him into the kitchen, and fed him. Thor ate like a creature almost famished. He slept in Jack's room that night.

Mrs. Lockwill was thrilled when she heard Jack's story, the next morning. "This is my mother, Thor," Jack told the dog. "You must always protect her."

But when Thor saw Benton, the chauffeur, his hairs bristled, and a hoarse growl came from his throat. "Take him away!" cried the man, in terror.

Jack sprang forward and placed himself between the dog and the man. "Back Thor! Back, sir!" he cried. "Down!" The animal seemed to relinquish its design on Benton with reluctance. "Where'd you get that beast?" chattered the frightened chauffeur. "I'll shoot him! I'll kill him!" If you harm that dog, returned Jack. "I'll see that you get a good long stretch in jail!"

IT'S A ROUGH GAME, IF YOU.
DON'T PLAY GOLF IN THE FAIRWAY.

It seems appropriate enough that Lew Worrell, America's new sun-millionaire, was a track coach before he ran his first nickel into a saw buck.

Milligan, so they tell me, is Scotland's favorite because in the rushes he will give no quarter.

Bobby Jones has entered the British open . . . and England has a strong contingent also.

One-eye Connolly is in the well-known Hollow Shell class. Anybody can "crash" a ball.

Of course, if you are a bike rider you are supposed to give the customers the run-around.

GEHR RESIGNS AS BASEBALL MANAGER

Will Continue With Club as Player—Expects Smith to Be His Successor.

Kaukauna—Alex Gehr has resigned as manager of the Kaukauna Baseball club. Although the resignation has not been accepted by the local club it is believed that it will be after Sunday's game.

Mr. Gehr will continue as a player on the local club. No new manager could be secured before Sunday and he agreed to assume the management of the club for Sunday's game with Neenah. Mr. Gehr said Smith of Combined Locks would be his likely successor. Mr. Smith has been playing ball at Grand Rapids, Mich., during the past few weeks and will be back at Kaukauna Monday. He played with the Kimberly team the early part of the season.

The president of the club, John Copper, said Thursday that the team's losses were not due to any fault of the manager. This is Kaukauna's first year in organized baseball after several years of inactivity and no one can expect the new players to be winners immediately. He added that all ball players must gain experience before they are good. Mr. Copper said the local club is competing with teams which have been playing ball steadily for the past few years and should be better than the Kaw team.

Kaukauna will meet Neenah at Neenah Sunday. There was some talk at first of bringing the game to Kaukauna and then making it a double header by playing off the postponed Kaukauna-Neenah game. This was suggested because Neenah does not have an enclosed ball park while Kaukauna has. The Neenah management, however, did not care to change the game and it will be played at the Neenah ball field.

ERECT FRAMEWORK OF NEW PICKLE FACTORY

Kaukauna—The framework for the new pickle factory has been erected and the entire building will be completed within a short time. The building is located just north of the power canal. It is to be ready for operation by the first week in August. Officials of the Laughlin and Flanagan Co. owners of the factory, expect the crops to be ready on Aug. 10 this year.

HOVDE WHIPS WELCH IN HARD TENNIS MATCH

Kaukauna—Jacob Hovde was forced to play three sets of tennis before he could defeat Gordon Welch in a Kaukauna Tennis club singles match Thursday afternoon. Welch took the first set 9-7, and then seemed to tire losing the next two, 6-1 and 6-2.

KAUKAUNA PERSONALS

Kaukauna—Mr. and Mrs. John Richards of Montreal, Quebec, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Frugh.

Mrs. Charles Abb and son Robert of Steven Point and Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Runte motored to Manitowoc Wednesday.

REPAIR BARGES

Kaukauna—A crew of men employed by the Fox River Navigation Co. has been kept busy the past week repairing barges at the U. S. drydock. These barges are being made ready for use during the remaining part of the summer.

HEAR BURGLAR ALARM

Kaukauna—The burglar alarm at the Farmers and Merchants bank went off about 2:15 Thursday morning. It was reported that the alarm was caused by a defect in the wiring.

REOPEN BRIDGE

Kaukauna—The Lawe-st bridge was again opened to traffic Friday morning. The bridge had been replaced and also received a coat of wood preservation. Minor repairs will be made on the bridge sidewalks.

POSTALS MAKE TRIPLE PLAY BUT LOSE GAME

Kaukauna—Mulfords trimmed the Postals, 7 to 6, a soft ball game at the municipal playgrounds Thursday evening. The clothing men held a 7 to 1 lead until the final inning when the government men staged a rally and scored five runs. A feature of the seventh inning was a triple play by the Postals. On a batted ball, Nagan got a man going to third, throwing to Carnot at first to catch the runner and Carnot relayed the ball to Treptow at second where another runner was snagged.

This win for the Mulfords raised the clothing men from seventh place to a tie for third with Thimbley. The Oils remained in the lead after their win over the Volleyballers Monday. The Electricians, following their win over the lowly bankers Tuesday, are hot on the trail of the leaders, only half a game separating them.

League standings:

League	W	L	Pct.

Electricians	N	4	.500
Thimbley	2	2	.500
Mulfords	2	2	.500

SAVANTS STILL WORK ON EINSTEIN THEORY

Scientists Evolve Technical Apparatus to Measure Speed of Light

BY ROY J. GIBBONS

Chicago—Within two years or so the world may know whether Einstein and his famous theory of relativity are right or wrong.

Scientists headed by Prof. A. A. Michelson of the University of Chicago here have set out to conduct the necessary tests.

The scene of their efforts was to have been on the quadrangle of Chicago University, but because of the heavy vibrations from traffic they are transferring the intricate equipment to Williams Bay, Wis.

Einstein first based his theory on what is known to the scientific world as the Michelson-Morley experiment undertaken by Prof. Michelson and Prof. Morley, now dead.

The problem involved in the experiment was the measurement of the speed of the earth and the entire solar system through space. Light was taken as the measuring stick. And the experiment produced what Prof. Michelson held was a negative result; that is, that the velocity of light appeared the same in all directions. To explain this fact, Einstein conceived his theory of relativity.

Recently, however, Prof. Dayton C. Miller of the Case School of Applied Science in Cleveland found a difference between the speed of light traveling in the direction of motion of the solar system, and the speed of light traveling at right angles to the direction of motion of the solar system.

The instrument used in these measuring tests is called an interferometer.

It is a device which, by means of two glass plates of exactly the same thickness, divides a ray of light into two parts, the divided rays are made to travel at right angles to each other. They are then reflected back into the interferometer plates so that the "interference fringes" of the light waves can then be measured. These fringes are something on the order of color bands produced when light passes through oil on a wet asphalt pavement. Light caused by the interference of two beams produces alternating light and dark bands. These are called fringes.

If Prof. Michelson observes any displacement in these fringes, the Einstein theory will be almost untenable.

The apparatus to be used in the experiment will be buried in the ground, and the light will travel through wooden boxes buried four or five feet deep to insure an even temperature and do away with vibration.

One of the arms of the interferometer will extend east-west. The other will point north-south. Each arm is 75 feet in length. When the apparatus is in readiness it will be rotated by the revolution of the earth to provide an interchange of direction necessary for relative results.

18 MINISTERS DENIED SUMMER VACATIONS

Madison — (AP)—Approximately 20 Congregational churches in Wisconsin allow their pastors more than six weeks of vacation and there are 18 which permit no vacation at all. Theodore R. Faville, editor of the Wisconsin Congregational Church Life announced in an editorial today.

"The conference goal is a month's vacation for every pastor," the editor continued. "I received 132 replies to a questionnaire sent out to Wisconsin pastors and was surprised to see the number who were allowed no 'playtime.'

"There is one church which allows a vacation of exactly one week, 13 churches for two weeks; 18 churches for three weeks; 66 churches for the full month; two for five weeks; eight for six weeks; 11 for two months and one permitting a 12 weeks vacation.

"Surely, there seems to be a discrepancy and wide variance in church policies in Wisconsin."

Badger Seal Drafted On Steps Of Wall Street Bank

Madison—(AP)—Of all the territorial and state seals of Wisconsin, the second great seal has perhaps the most interesting history, as related in the current number of the Wisconsin Magazine of History by Victor Kutchin, a curator of the Society.

The first great seal of the state of Wisconsin was used until March 1, 1851. This seal did not please Governor Nelson Dewey and therefore in 1851 he applied to Dr. John H. Lathrop, first chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, to draft a new one.

"Cleverly enough," writes Mr. Kutchin, "the second great seal was gotten up by Governor Dewey and Judge Ryan of New York. Happening to go to New York city not long after Lathrop had submitted his sketch, Dewey took it with him to engrave.

"The story goes, that on the way he met in Wall street, Edward G. Ryan, afterwards chief justice of the Wisconsin supreme court, and acquainted the latter with his errand. Sitting down together on the steps of a bank, these two distinguished pioneers discussed the Lathrop design. Ryan criticized it rather severely, particularly objecting to the terrestrial passages and in derision they were termed "Badgers."

At the same time, the term "Suck-er" was applied to the migratory inhabitants of Southern Illinois, who, like the fish of the approach of winter, By a natural adaptation, these names were thenceforth applied to the people of the state and to the state itself.

METEOR FALLS NEAR CYCLIST

While people in all parts of England viewed the falling of a meteor last Friday, Reginald Harvey had a close view that was not expected or desired.

Governor Dewey and Judge Ryan agreed on everything but the motto for the state. "Judge Ryan," continues Kutchin, "was for 'Excelsior,' Governor Dewey for 'Forward,' the grandest word in the language, and no entreaty, denunciation or eloquence could budge him; and if for nothing else, in the selection of that noble motto, he earned the respect and admiration of every Badger, as long as Wisconsin continues as a way-shower to all the other states."

It is interesting to note how the term "Badger" came to be applied to the emblem of the state. The State Historical Society of Wisconsin's Bulletin of Information tells of the early miners who came to Wisconsin to prospect for lead. The manner in which they dug for the ore resembled the burrowing of the badgers. The miners literally lived in these temporary sub-

WATCH YOUNGSTERS ON SUMMER TRIPSDangerous to Subject Children to Un-tried Water and Milk

Madison—(AP)—The state board of health Thursday issued a warning to parents who contemplate taking their youngsters on summer trips and camping expeditions to guard the supplies of water and food given the children.

The parents, said an announcement from the board, "have a special responsibility to shield them against certain summer troubles which can usually be avoided by careful attention to certain factors."

The injection warned against indiscriminate use of water, milk and all other food supplies, "regardless of their source."

"Warm months bring increased danger to small children from enteric diseases," it said. "This is because warm weather favors the breeding of bacteria, especially in milk which is not properly kept. Many years ago, when communities had not made efforts for purification of water and milk supplies, we were confronted with greatly increased sickness rates among infants and small children at this season of the year. With a better application of these measures, infant mortality has now dropped. But there is still much danger along these lines."

especially in the case of summer campers.

WATCH WATER SUPPLY

"In traveling it is well to see that the water consumed is of pure quality. Campers, fishermen, canoeists, etc., are often tempted to drink from streams."

"This is dangerous. Do not drink from any surface supply. The water from a pond, lake or stream is fit to drink, for drainage into them is an uncertain factor. Most towns in Wisconsin provide pure water from wells or by other purification methods. The artists can readily obtain water from sizable communities and carry it with him. As a further protection, travelers should be vaccinated against typhoid."

"The milk supply likewise should be obtained from reliable sources. Milk should never be used unless fresh and should be kept cold until used, always in a closed container."
